

Let's start this new project !!

Question

How am I going to react when I got to face myself into a personal project?
First round : Being able to build a coherent planning I will be able to follow.

Objective

Find new levers which could make enable to go on and to stop milestones.

Activities

This first activity was a conception one, during which I try to organize my four following months.

I thought at all the activities that could be interesting and constructive to me in order to raise my professional project : report on my last experience, interviews and prospection with professional and teachers (considered as experts), redaction of a synthesis and then decision-making, redaction of CV or motivation letter to postulate to some missions. Afterwards, what was entertaining was to find a guiding light, a link thanks to which I will have a hierarchy to follow. In fact, it's necessary to create a progression through these 4 months.

What's more, I tried the most to adapt and to make my English work correspond to my professional one.

Evaluation

This part is the one I considered the most difficult to me! In fact, despite the fact that I have a good vision of my project and that I'm not feared at all to evolve in vagueness, I always have difficulties to set down actions, to have a clear and visible notebook. Plus, anticipating my actions in case of diseases has always been a thing I make when others are involved but I never do with myself. This time this reality was still true, in fact, even if I think about it since two weeks, I wait for today to write down my planning. But thanks to the different milestones I set and that I will have to foresee how to organize my next actions, I will have to anticipate my actions. So let's say that it was the warm-up! Now professional mode is on!!!

Conclusion

It was a bit hard to synchronize all my futures actions but it was a first exercise that really shows me where I have to work. It was very constructive and I know the big part of my work will be to anticipate my actions in order to be able to follow my planning.

To be continued

- Writing my report from my summer training course.
- Contact some teachers to set meetings and begin to search for professional contact
